This and That

The Bible tells us there is going to be a day of reckoning at the end of the world. Jesus will come back, the dead will be raised and we will be judged. Jesus will be the judge (Acts 17:31), the Bible will be the standard (John 12:48), and eternal destiny will be the ruling (Matthew 25:46). According to Matthew 25, the difference in whether a person goes to heaven or to hell will be decided by what they did or did not do with respect to others. After becoming a Christian we have an obligation to God, self, and others. To sit idly by as others need help is unacceptable to the Lord. Jesus said,

I was hungry and thirsty and you either fed me and gave me drink or you did not. Now since Jesus is not here physically we understand that He does not mean He Himself was in need of food and water. Well, who is He talking about? According to the parable of the Good Samaritan, Jesus indicated our neighbor is the one who has need. So when we look around us and see hungry or thirsty people how should we react? Should we look the other way or should we give food and water to those who need it?

I was a stranger and ye either took me in or you did not. The word stranger here means a new person, alien, or foreigner. Whenever a new person comes to our congregation, neighborhood, school, or work, how do we react? Do we do our best to make that person feel at ease and accepted? Or do we refrain from socializing with the person? How would you feel if you were the new person?

I was naked and you either clothed me or you did not. Are there needy people in our neighborhoods? Are there children that need shoes and coats to wear? Do we seek out people to help or do we wait for people to ask for our help?

I was sick or in prison and you either ministered unto me or you did not. How do we behave toward those who are sick or shut-in? I feel sometimes those in the nursing homes are as one in prison. They may be there against their will and often times left desolate. Do we minister to these people or do we leave them to fend for themselves? Do we pray for God to help them and do nothing ourselves or do we do everything we can and ask the Lord for help in doing more? These things were mentioned in Matthew 25 as among the things people were judged by. Think about it.
