This and That

We need other people in our lives. God said it was not good for man to be alone. Therefore he made a helper comparable to him. We are made better by our relationships with each other. Whether it is a parent/child relationship, husband/wife, or just a friendship, there are benefits. Our confidence in another allows us to communicate our deeper feelings and needs to such a person. We may receive support that helps calm fears or insecurities. We may also be made to feel stronger and more able due to the encouragement of another. On the other hand, our faults may surface and we may realize the need to improve. We should realize the many ways in which we benefit from others and “give back” to make the relationships complete.

Whether religiously, spiritually, or physically, how many ways have you personally benefited by a relationship with the Lord? David realized the many ways the Lord helped him when he said, “What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?” Psalms 116:12. David had been selected to go from being a shepherd boy to become the king of Israel. However, before he could ascend to the throne, he had to endure being hunted and tracked as an animal by the king and his accomplices. But all along the way God was aware of David and his needs. He was fed and clothed. He had friends who would not desert him. Their home may be a cave or wilderness dwelling, but there was always shelter from the elements. Many of David’s psalms were written as a result of these days of trial.

The Lord has forgiven us of all our sins. He has promised to never leave us or forsake us. Our daily needs are always met and the future holds the promise of everlasting life. The Holy Bible and the church are constant companions to guide us throughout our lives. No wonder David could say, “yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.” What great blessing we receive as a Christian! Think about it. Daniel Newell
