Revelation 21:1-4 ¹ And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. ² And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. ³ And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. ⁴ And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

The story is told of David Lipscomb, a leader in the Restoration Movement, having difficulty giving scripturally. He is reported to have said that when he would attempt to give a certain amount, he would have doubts, thinking to himself, "Brother Johnson makes much more money than I do, and he gives less than I am giving."

Lipscomb realized that he was being tempted to be greedy, and he purposed in his heart to fight the temptation. He determined that each time he was tempted to give less, he would double the amount he planned to give. If he planned to give $10 and nagging thoughts of stinginess crept in, he immediately doubled his giving to $20. In a few short months, Lipscomb showed his bank account who was boss, and became the master of his money.

Sound Doctrine: by James A. Allen

The common experience of mankind has proven it is best to obey God. All the reason in the universe shows that man should conform himself to the will of his maker. The history of the world, during its long and checkered career, has fully demonstrated that, "the way of the wicked shall perish" and that, in the end, God's truth is vindicated, while those who love it are exonerated and saved.

In all the varied fortunes of the human family, the rise and fall of nations and the ascendancy and decline of empires, those who love and obey truth have always felt the protecting hand of God. David said: "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread" (Psalm 37:25).

The institution called "the church" is the scheme of heaven to ameliorate and save the world. It is, indeed, the greatest and grandest institution ever known among men. In it are, and have been, all the wise, good and pure men and women that have ever lived on the earth. The world can never comprehend the extent to which it is indebted to the church of Jesus Christ.

All of those ennobling and uplifting energies that raise and benefit the human race in every sphere of thought, character, and action radiate from, and are exerted through, Jesus Christ. In His body, the church, alone, salvation is found. There is a feeling of security, contentment, a heaven-born peace of mind that comes to the immersed believer in Jesus to which the alien must always be a stranger.

To the church, as the tender of the gospel, "God's power to save," the Lord Messiah committed the great work of preaching it and teaching it to the tribes and peoples of the earth. "Go ye therefore," said He to His apostles, "and teach all nations" (Matthew 28:19). The grand command, the cardinal extent of the responsibility, is to "go." To do so, the early ministers of the gospel, attaching much importance to the command, very gladly made the most rigorous sacrifices, endured dishonor, imprisonment, punishment and death.

To indoctrinate the peoples with the principles of the gospel, which alone can save, was the great aim, purpose and ambition of their lives. Whether at home or abroad, on land or sea, they remembered the command of their Lord to the apostles: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15).
