This and That

Its that time of year again. Yes, its Vacation Bible School time. Folks have been busy decorating rooms and preparing lessons. Hopefully we have invited someone to come and share this wonderful adventure with us. This year we are “Fishing With the Master”. A series of lessons designed to train and inspire us to become fishers of men, women, boys, and girls. I have fabulous memories of VBS when I was a kid and I hope we can create some memories for this year’s participants. There are many benefits to a carefully planned and executed VBS. Here is just a few:

- We become focused as a church on one goal. That goal is to present the best learning experience possible for this years kids and young adults. This makes us grow closer to each other as we work for this common goal.
- We learn more about Jesus and our responsibility to him. Rehearsed are the ways to approach someone and how to teach them the gospel of Christ.
- Kids learn of our love for them and our willingness to give them a comfortable environment supplied with good things to do. These “good things to do” reveals Jesus to them in a manner that makes it easy for them to learn.
- We open our doors to adults of different congregations and/or environments. This allows us to express our Christian love and concern for the spiritual welfare of others.
- Crafts and handouts received by the children are taken home where a concerned parent may learn something of Jesus’ love for them as well. This may cause them to want to become more acquainted with our congregation.
- God and Jesus are shown to be important to us and therefore they are glorified through our efforts to reach into the community. People actually see a concerted effort to teach the children of our area about Jesus.

There are many good things that could be said. But I think these are sufficient to excite us about the opportunities that are presented us. How are you participating? Think about it.
